U2, The Little Things That Give You Away

The nights gave you song
A light had been turned on
You walked out in the world
Like you belong here

As easy as a breeze
Each heart was yours to please
Is it only me who sees
There’s something wrong there

I’m not a ghost there
I can see you
I can see you
You need to see me

It’s the little things that gave you away
The words you cannot say
Your big mouth in the way
It’s the little things that tease and betray
As the haunted I become the prey
It’s the little things
the little things that give you away

I saw you on the stairs
You didn’t notice I was there
That’s cos you’re talking to me
Not to
You’re high above the storm
A hurricane being born
What was a freedom
It might cost you your liberty

It’s the little things that gave you away
The words you cannot say
Your big mouth in the way
It’s the little things that tease and betray
As the haunted I become the prey
It’s the little things

sometimes
I can’t believe in my existence
See myself on a distance
I can’t get back inside
Sometimes
The air is so anxious
All my tasks are so thankless
And all of my innocence had died
Sometimes
I wake at 4 in the morning
Where all the doubt is swarming
And it covers me in fear
Sometimes /7x
Full of anger and grieving
So far away from believing
That any song will reappear
Sometimes
The end is not dawning
It’s not coming
The end is here
