Rag'n'Bone Man, Grace

Said I love you without hesitation
So easy for you to break my foolish heart
So I wonder if you ever speak my name
Will I always be defined by my mistake?

In the arms of the Saint I’m a stranger
We’re all trying to find our way
At the death of every darkness there’s morning
Though we all try, we all try
We’re all one step from grace

I made myself believe
There was no fight left in me
But redemption doesn’t fall down at you feet
In the half light
We raised a hand to my defeat
And I watched the world fall
And I rebuilt it piece by piece

In the arms of the Saint I’m a stranger
We’re all trying to find our way
At the death of every darkness there’s morning
Though we all try, we all try
We’re all one step from grace

I wonder why we give up on love
When it’s all it really needs
You and I we suffered this enough
We all try, we all try
We’re all one step from grace

In the arms of the Saint I’m a stranger
We’re all trying to find our way
At the death of every darkness there’s morning
Though we all try, we all try
We’re all one step from grace
