Tom Grennan, Someone I Used to Know

I kept the photographs but somehow they don't look the same
Like all the memories that we made
Your silence speaks so loud. Am I supposed to stand and wait?
'Cause I'm done with all the games you play

And every word is like a streetlight
Watching them fade as you keep walking away
You don't see my heart is breaking
All these years they disappear like they never existed

And, now, I'm running through the dark
And I don't see the way
Caught in the crossfire of you and I no one to blame
Still I don't know how this is how it goes
Your colors have been shown
Now standing right in front of me is someone I used to know

So do you ever stop to think and try to call me up?
Oh, I don't think I'm asking for much
'Cause I refuse to beg but I wish that you could see me cry
We're so heavy on my shoulders

Every word is like a streetlight
Watching them fade as you keep walking away
You don't see my heart is breaking
All these years they disappear like they never existed

Oh, and now, I'm running through the dark
And I don't see the way (The way)
Caught in the crossfire of you and I no one to blame (To blame)
Still I don't know how this is how it goes
Your colors have been shown
Now standing right in front of me is someone I used to know

That I used to know
Guess this is how it goes
Your colors have been shown
'Cause standing right in front of me is someone I used to know

I wish that you could see the way for me that nothing's changed
So who let you just walk away from me?
'Cause I've got nothing left to give
And this body of mine feels so empty

And, now, I'm running through the dark
And I don't see the way
Caught in the crossfire of you and I no one to blame (To blame)
Still I don't know how this is how it goes
Your colors have been shown
Standing right in front of me is someone I used to know
