

Information Society, Still Here

So I dreamed we were somewhere and everything you said was real and everything I said was right that we don't have to fear the night Then I'm in light and I still find that when we look around we still feel like we're running out of time and there is nothing left for us to try We stay together now when all the signals say we should move on from here But I don't think it's coincidence and I don't believe in accidents It's time to ask ourselves Why are we still here Come back down and we still find that all our waking fears are around us and shining in our eyes they are blinding out the skies Something still you don't give me something that just won't break You sit there silent in your place and try to see your face Why do we still try when all our time is spent in Holding on to hope
