Jack Garratt, Fire

Tell me I'm fine, baby
Tell me to open up
Ease my eyes, baby
They've seen so much
Tell me you're mine, baby
Tell me before I irrupt
Burn up in the sky, baby
Become the dust

I can see no use in it
You're in your burning heart
Just to cool mine
It's such a waste of your time
But to the view takes every way
I have when daylight comes
And we leave the night

Give me your fire!
Give me reasons to learn
Give me every inch that used to burn
Let your flames rise
Let your flames,
Tell me you'll be fine, baby
Leave me till I am distilled
And clean as the water, baby
And pour it over my fears,
My fears

I can see no use in it
Nor in your beating chest
Just when you cry
It can't be good for your heart
If loving me means every tear
Your tear will burn your skin
As it leaves your eye

Give me your fire
Give me reasons to learn
Give me every inch that used to burn
Let your flames rise,
Let your flames rise higher
Too far for you to touch
Too hard is never too much
Let your flames rise
Let your flames
Give me your fire
Give me every inch that used to burn
Let your flames rise
Let your flames rise higher

Give me your
Give me your
Give me your fire
Give me your everything
Give /10x

I can feel the darkness in me
No matter, only a disaster waiting to be Set fire to and set free from my anatomy

But I can feel the warmth from your heart
To fight the fire will make the darkness depart
So come a little closer and then bring me my melody
